CHOICE

SELECTING AN EXPERT

Selecting a medical expert(s) is the single most important decision an attorney makes when preparing a case. The impact that a physician who is knowledgeable, prepared, experienced and personable can make on a case cannot be over estimated. However, many of these intangible qualities are simply not apparent from a CV, nor can they be deduced from the typical, hurried phone conversation that many medical experts grudgingly provide inquiring attorneys.

PURSUING THE RIGHT CASES; AMFS MERIT REVIEW SERVICE

Our unique Merit Review Service puts a broad and deep panel of Physicians from all major specialty areas at your service for a low, fixed fee.

We know it is often difficult to determine which cases to pursue. That's why it is important to obtain authoritative, independent and impartial analysis of a client's medical records when making the decision to take on a new case. AMFS' Merit Review service is perfectly suited for attorneys looking to pursue only those cases with the highest probability of success. For a low, fixed rate, members of our Multidisciplinary Physician Advisory Panel (consisting of more than 50 board-certified physicians experienced in all major medical specialties) will perform a review of medical records and render an opinion as to the merits of the case.

AMFS offers a far superior method for obtaining these critical medical experts. Upon retention, one of our in-house physicians will make a doctor to doctor presentation of the medical issues present in your case to a number of qualified, potential experts, in effect, interviewing prospective medical experts on your behalf. To ensure honesty and objectivity, our physician presents only the facts to the potential medical expert and does not reveal whether the claimant or the defendant has initiated the request. Thus, the initial discussion of your case takes place in the context of total objectivity. Conflict checks, our prior experience with the physician, the tone of the conversation about your medical malpractice issues and your specific case needs all inform our search for the ideal medical expert or experts.

Once you have approved the expert designation, our staff works hard to make sure that you remain in control of your expert(s) billing and scheduling. Your expert is required to provide you with time estimates for each task you have assigned and our office reviews these estimates to make sure they are appropriate. If not, we will modify your expert's estimate on your behalf. Our staff also assists you in handling scheduling issues with your expert so that your case moves forward smoothly and expeditiously. This enables you to avoid procedural conflicts that can sour your working relationship and sabotage your case.
